The White Tower. The imposing "keep" of the Castle and the most ancient part of the fortress is an immense square building with corner turrets and pierced with Norman windows and arches. It is in four tiers—the vaults, the main floor, the banqueting floor and the State floor; its outer walls being 15 feet thick and the partition walls of the chambers 10 feet thick. This central core of the Castle was begun by William the Conqueror in 1078.
